NOTES FOR THE MUSIC INDEX

- 1) The original but now antiquated spelling is “Saa tag mit Hjerte”.
- 2) The original but now antiquated spelling is “Skogen sofer”.
- 3) This “traditional” version of “Au fond du temple saint” comes from a revision of the opera in 1893, long after the composer’s death. In his original, the concluding declaration of friendship is set to other music. A section in the middle of the duet has also been omitted in the recording. This duet was not otherwise in Björling’s repertoire.
- 4) "Barndomshemmet" is a free adaptation of Dresser's song. Karl Ewert's text, dealing with a Swedish immigrant in the US remembering the "red little cottage" of his childhood, was written for the popular singer Ernst Rolf. When Rolf published the song as sheet music, an otherwise unknown P. Würck was given as the composer.
- 5) In jbp 2, “Se i miei sospiri” was assumed to be a work by Louis Niedermeyer, in accordance with e.g. The New Grove, but later research shows that this is unlikely. The composition was performed for the first time in 1833 in Paris at a concert arranged by Fétis, who claimed that it was a recently discovered work by Alessandro Stradella. However, for stylistic reasons, this does not seem possible, and many works have falsely been attributed to Stradella. The origin of the aria, which has also been attributed for instance to Rossini, has been treated in an article by Sarah Hibberd (“Murder in the Cathedral? Stradella, Musical Power, and Performing the Past in 1830s Paris”; Music and Letters 87:4 pp. 551-579). Hibberd did not find any other evidence for Niedermeyer as composer than an unverified attribution in an 1843 edition, which may have been connected with the fact that Niedermeyer had written an opera about Stradella. That opera did not, however, contain the aria. Nobody but Fétis seems to have seen the manuscript of the aria which he claimed to own. However, he owned the oratorio Il martirio di Santa Teodosia by Alessandro Scarlatti, and the text for “Se i miei sospiri” is identical with the second verse of the aria “Se il mio dolore potesse frangere” in that oratorio. Hibberd’s conclusion is that Fétis himself is most probably the composer – a theory which had also been put forward much earlier.
Another text, which begins “Pietà, Signore, di me dolente!”, has been used with this tune by several famous tenors, and the aria was listed as “Pietà, Signore” on the program of the Bergen concert where it was recorded with Björling.
- 6) References differ regarding the origin of “The Rose of Tralee”. Spencer and Glover may have adapted a traditional song for publication. William Pembroke Mulchinock has also been credited with the lyrics.
- 7) It seems most correct to regard “Jeg elsker dig” as sung in Norwegian, although H.C. Andersen's poem is written in Danish and the text has not been modified. In Andersen's days, the two written languages were practically identical, and Björling uses Norwegian pronunciation.
- 8) There are several Swedish text versions of Gruber’s Christmas song, all beginning “Stilla natt, heliga natt”. The author of the text used by the Björlings (continuing “...världen all slumrar still”) is not known.
- 9) “Ninon” was published in Sweden as sheet music with the same text but with the title "En sång till dig".
- 10) Englund was indicated on the original label as author of the Swedish text “Du går som en liten prinsessa”. However, in 1954 this tune was published as sheet music with the same text but with the title "Violen från Montmartre", and then Björn & Anita Halldén (pseud.: Nalle Halldén & S.S. Wilson) were named as text authors.
- 11) The original but now antiquated spelling is "Hvita rosor".
- 12) The version in Sicilian dialect (O Lola, c'hai di latti) was used by Björling in the complete recordings.
- 13) “La danza” was also used for B. Paumgartner's opera Rossini in Neapel, the title role of which JB sang at the Royal Opera in Stockholm in 1936/37.

- 14) The original but now antiquated spelling is "Säf, säf, susa".
- 15) "Trollsjön" was actually composed to Schreiber's German text (Der Mummelsee), but since it has become known exclusively in the Swedish version, it is here treated as a Swedish original.
- 16) Riccardo's aria in act 3 of Un ballo in maschera, "Ma se m'è forza perderti", is missing in Björling's both complete recordings, although he is known to have sometimes performed it.
- 17) Don Carlo was originally presented in a French 5-act version as Don Carlos, but revised and abridged to four acts by the composer for a production in Italian in 1884. JB sang in the abridged Italian version, and most of the scene with Posa which he recorded had been rewritten by Verdi for this version (the duet "Dio che nell'alma infondere" was directly taken from act 2 of the original version). The opera is here treated as an Italian work.
- 18) #82 comprises both verses of "Ack Värmeland du sköna", while #37.06 is an abridged version, combining the beginning of verse 1 and the end of verse 2.
- 19) "Tantis serenad" alludes to the clown and circus manager Tanti (real name: Constantino Vulgo Bedini, 1861-1900), who was born in Italy but spent the last part of his life in Sweden. The song was originally published in Sweden in 1902 as "Månstrålar klara", but with "Tantis serenad" also noted on the cover. This sheet, which did not indicate any origin of words or music, also had a Danish version of the text. Arvid Ödmann (who was one of the most famous tenors in the history of the Royal Opera) was noted in the publisher's archive as author (translator?) of the lyrics. It seems probable that the tune is identical with an allegedly Italian one which Tanti used to sing with the refrain "Evviva Stoccolma" to his own concertina accompaniment, but there is no proof that he ever saw this text.
